St Mary's Bay

St Mary's Bay is one of South Devon's harder to reach beaches offering picturesque surroundings for more able-bodied beach lovers. Located below South Bay Holiday Park, St. Mary's Bay is not easy to get to, so it's fairly quiet even in the peak of summer. The beach is flanked by steep cliffs which provide the scenic outlook and also means the bay is sheltered.

Access to the Beach from the caravan.

Follow St. Mary's Road down hill until you find a steep footpath going off to the left. This will take you to the top of the cliff. The new wooden carving of St. Mary is situated there. One hundred and twelve steps will take you down to the beach. These steps can be tricky and slippery in places especially for young children, the elderly or if you are carrying beach goods. Coming back up the steps after visiting the beach is, of course, the hard bit.

The beach is a mixture of sand and shingle, with interesting rock formations and surrounding cliffs. As mentioned above, St. Mary's Bay is flanked on both sides by hillside creating sheltered waters for swimming. There is no lifeguard.

As the beach is remote to access, there are no facilities on the beach or above on the coastal path, so remember take everything you need as you won't want to do the steps again unnecessarily!

History of Brixham

Brixham has a fascinating maritime history stretching back a thousand years and more.

The ancient Britons may have launched their coracles from the sheltered beaches and the Romans are thought to have had a watch-tower on Berry Head overlooking the sea route from Lyme Bay to the Southwest.

There are many thrilling stories of smuggling in Brixham with evidence as early as 1645 when the Customs House Officer reported a find of tobacco.

In the 1850s Brixham's enterprising smugglers took advantage of a cholera epidemic to smuggle out a booty of tobacco and brandy in coffins!

Fishing since Medieval times! It is fishing, however, that has been the lifeblood of the community since the fourteen hundreds and Brixham fishermen were known to be supplying the London markets in the 18th century.

In 1688, Brixham was the cradle of the Bloodless Revolution. Prince William of Orange landed at the port and went on to claim the throne as King William III. You can't miss the statue which commemorates the site in both English and Dutch, by the harbour.

Roman artefacts found at Berry Head suggest a long history of sea defence on the headland, but the first evidence of a battery and camp on the site dates from the 1780s. In 1803 work on three substantial forts began, which held a total of 40 canons - interestingly, these were never fired in anger. Many of the remains of these Napoleonic fortifications can be seen today and the guardhouse is now a busy café.

Coastal defence and preservation: In World War Two, many Brixham trawlers were requisitioned for the evacuation of the British Expeditionary Force from France and in 1944 the harbour was one of many along the south coast to be used by the US Army for embarking prior to the invasion of Normandy. The town's Battery Gardens were an important part of the area's coastal defences and housed guns manned first by troops but subsequently taken over by the Home Guard. Of the 116 of these emergency sites set up during the war years, only 7 remain today and Brixham's is the most important and well preserved of these.

There's an abundance of things to do and see in Devon

On offer are rugged cliffs, white pebble beaches, stretches of golden sands, quaint fishing ports, hidden wooded estuaries and the Jurassic Coast – England's first natural World Heritage Site. The choice along Devon's dual coastlines is varied and fun, offering something for enthusiasts and beginners of all ages. You can enjoy everything from sailing, surfing and canoeing – to boat trips, fishing and diving. Or you can try some fishing, riding or simply walking the miles of way-marked footpaths and bridleways to discover welcoming country pubs, specialist shops and lively farmers' markets.

But that's not all this exciting county has to offer. Devon is also rich in history and heritage. You can step back in time and explore historic cities or discover seafaring characters like Drake and Raleigh or the settings for novels by Agatha Christie and Conan Doyle. The county also abounds with ancient cathedrals and churches as well as historic houses and industrial sites that all have their own tale to tell. With such a rich heritage it's not surprising that there is an abundance of heritage centres, events, exhibitions and attractions bringing to life Devon's long and diverse history, such as at Morwellham Quay near Tavistock or Coldharbour Mill near Cullompton.
